The American Psychiatric Association Publishing Textbook of Geriatric Psychiatry, Sixth Edition

Edited by David C. Steffens, M.D., M.H.S., and Kristina F. Zdanys, M.D.

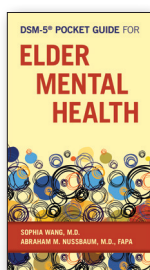

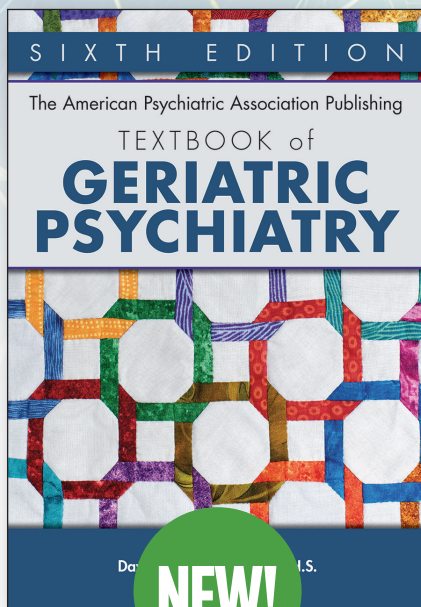

This new edition retains the multidisciplinary and developmental perspectives of its predecessors, drawing on the knowledge not only of psychiatrists but also of relevant biomedical and behavioral experts in order to present the most comprehensive approach to patient care.

It has been extensively updated to reflect the latest scientific advances and clinical developments in the field. Not only will readers find the most up-to-date information on phenomenology, diagnosis, and assessment of late-life mental disorders, they will also access the latest research on psychotherapeutic, psychopharmacological, and other somatic treatments. A dedicated chapter delves into the role of technology—including digital phenotyping, wearables, digital and Web-based neurocognitive testing, and more—in aiding the geriatric mental health workforce and improving both access to care and ongoing support.

Throughout the book, several sections also candidly examine the impact of COVID-19, and its attendant social isolation, on older adult mental health and the evolution of treatment approaches, revealing insights learned about telepsychiatry and care in nursing homes during the pandemic.

Chapters on the legal and ethical factors in the psychiatric care of older adults close out the book, the most exhaustive on the topic. Extensively researched and with key points for ease of reference, this edition will equip both the scholar and the clinician with the current state of scientific understanding as well as the practical skills and knowledge base required for dealing with mental disorders in late life.

Geriatric Mental Health Care Lessons From a Pandemic

Edited by Robert P. Roca, M.D., M.P.H., Micheline Dugué, M.D., and Maria Llorente, M.D., FAPA

The effects of the COVID-19 pandemic on older adults have been well documented. In the case of older patients with mental illness, these challenges are magnified. Introductory case vignettes, easily referenced key takeaways, and multiple-choice questions designed to reinforce learning offer detailed descriptions of clinical and social innovations to mitigate the impact of the pandemic on older patients. Through detailed discussion of inpatient geriatric psychiatry, telehealth models of care, health staff concerns, and social determinants of health, as well as nonclinical factors that affect the broader clinical effort, this book provides techniques that health care providers can use to overcome the challenges of the current pandemic—and prepare for the next one.

Practical Strategies in Geriatric Mental Health Cases and Approaches

Edited by Laura B. Dunn, M.D., and Erin L. Cassidy-Eagle, Ph.D.

This book provides practical, up-to-the-minute information and tools for clinicians working with older adults, the fastest growing segment of the U.S. population. This book offers the most practical clinical and research insights across the most relevant, frequently encountered diagnostic and treatment problems. Each chapter is organized in a logical, easy-to-follow structure that hinges discussion of a particular symptom or disorder on the presentation of a representative, realistic clinical vignette.

Culture, Heritage, and Diversity in Older Adult Mental Health Care

Edited by Maria Llorente, M.D., FAPA
APA Council on Geriatric Psychiatry

This book was written in response to demographic changes in the United States and the need to educate clinicians to provide culturally competent care. This book is designed to inform these individuals and groups about the specific needs of different patient populations, educate them about evidence-based models of culturally competent health care services delivery, and train them in the skills needed to function in an increasingly diverse arena.

Late-Life Depression and Anxiety

Edited by Art Walaszek, M.D.

Late-Life Depression and Anxiety empowers health care professionals to accurately identify and diagnose anxiety and depression in older adult patients and help them find relief, stay independent, and lower their risk of suicide. Experienced physicians, new practitioners, residents, and other health care providers can all quickly gain up-to-date knowledge of the scope and seriousness of depression, anxiety, and suicide in older adults, alongside a system of proven assessment and treatment techniques for turning evidence-based theory into practice. Contributing authors give clinicians a wide range of information in a potent blend of academic theory and practical experience including an easy-to-implement approach to identifying and managing depression and anxiety in older adults and reducing the risk of suicide. The book discusses dependable assessment methods that consider multiple factors of mental health, including medical, behavioral, personal, social, and spiritual and provides guidance on culturally sensitive care to geriatric patients of diverse races, ethnicities, gender identities and sexual orientations, and intellectual abilities.

Behavioral and Psychological Symptoms of Dementia

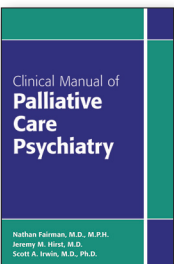

Art Walaszek, M.D.

In concise, down-to-earth prose, the author tackles the question, “What should I do when my patient with dementia has a behavior that is affecting his or her quality of life or safety?” This question is at the heart of the most critical issues in assessment and management faced by clinicians. Key points, resources, and recommendations that are supported by the clinical literature and standard of care are provided for the reader. Strategically selected case examples present patient situations that clinicians are likely to encounter and effective ways to address both patient and caregiver needs.

Clinical Manual of Palliative Care Psychiatry

Nathan Fairman, M.D., M.P.H., Jeremy M. Hirst, M.D., and Scott A. Irwin, M.D., Ph.D.

The book seeks to bridge the gulf between principles and practice for two groups of clinicians: frontline palliative care providers with little mental health training and mental health specialists who may lack familiarity with palliative care practice. The book reviews palliative care principles and practice models, treatment of the psychiatric symptoms most commonly encountered in palliative care settings, and special topics, such as agitation in end-stage dementia, pain management and psychopharmacology, substance use disorders, and palliative care for children and adolescents.

Casebook of Neuropsychiatry

Edited by Trevor A. Hurwitz, M.B., Ch.B., and Warren T. Lee, M.D., Ph.D.

The book is comprised of 38 clinical cases based on real patient interactions that straddle the domains of neurology and psychiatry. While scientifically rigorous and grounded in neuroanatomy and neurochemistry, the cases are written in an accessible, down-to-earth style that makes them easy to relate to and understand. The book focuses on skills that are not typically emphasized in general psychiatric or neurological training, filling a critical gap and broadening the reader's knowledge base.
